TO HONOR THE MEMORY OF GENERAL R.E.LEE

Daughters of the South Propose an Equestrian Statue.

Confederate Leader's Likeness to Overlook the Potemac.

Prominent Women Leave for Fort Myer Heights This Afternoon to Select a Site.

For some time past there has been quiet movement on foot to erect somewhere in the vicinity of Washington an equestrian statue of Gen. Robert E. Lee, the famous leader of the Confederacy. The various Southern organizations throughou the country have been interested in the matter, and an effort has been made several times to bring it to public attention. More important affairs have hitherto crowded it out, and very little has been done. Of late, however, the sentiment in favor of the erection of the Lee statue has been growing, and the agitation has reached such a stage that a party of ladies representing the Southern people in Washington will leave for Fort Myer Heights this afternoon for the purpose of selecting a site for the statue, which will be crected when funds have been raised.

The objects of the projectors of the scheme in going to the other side of the river for their site are many. The principal reason is that the old Lee Mansion at Arlington, which was seized by the Government at the beginning of the Civil War, is situated on the heights overlooking the Potomac and the people interested in the statue project intend that the monin the statue project intend that the mon-ument to the memory of the famous Con-federate soldier shall be as near his old lederate soldier shall be as near his old home as possible. The view of the city from the heights is one of the most beau-tiful surrounding Washington, and the projectors intend that the statue shall occupy an eminence that will overlook the Capital. The beauty and grandeur of the Upper Potomac will be greatly enhanced, they contend by the erection of such a

The matter is entirely in the hands of the Indies of the various organizations and they want to keep it to themselves. They will not object to the contribution of funds by those outside of their organization, but they intend that the statue shall be a mon-ument to the memory of the great Confed-erate from the women of the South. They consider that, in recognition of the valuable services rendered the Government by General Lee before the civil war, all sentiment in opposition to the building of the statue will be futile. They call attention to the fact that General Lee's reputation as a soldier in the regular army was of the highest order and the services render-ed the United States during the Mexican war and the tunulfous times directly fol-lowing the acquisition of Texas, were most

As a soldier General Lee has been recognized throughout the world as one of the greatest that America has ever pro-duced. All this, the women interested in the erection of the statue say, entitles him to a lasting monument.

The movement, while quietly conducted, is very strong, and from present prospects it seems almost certain that the patriotic band of women will succeed in its endeavors, and in a short time there will be reared on the heights overlooking the Capital City a statue to the immortal leader of the armies of the Confederacy.

STORMS IN SOUTH AND WEST. Several Lives Reported Lost Much Property Damaged.

West Point, Ga., May 9.-A report has reached here of the death of several negroes in a storm which swept over Chambers county late Sunday night. The rumor cannot be verified, as all the wires in that direction are down. The storm here unroofed the carshops of the Atlanta and West Point Railroad, and created a small

Her husband shrank beneath the flerce blows, shielding his face. Mrs. Siebs hurled him out into the street.

The operation was performed by Dr. Gorham Bacon, with twelve physicians in attendance. Jennings was told of his slim chances of recovery, but courageously told the physicians to go ahead. At this point the patient passed through the most critical period. He was not under the influence of a drug, but lost all consciousness. Twice his pulse disappeared entirely. Dewey's Eyesight Falling.

A story is told of Admiral Dewey on authority of an officer "who stood by the Admiral when the incident occurred." During a fight, when the incident occurred." During a fight, when the insurgents were being mowed down after a particularly villainous attack on the Americans, Aguinaldo sent out a flag of truce. It was not a particularly clean flag, but a keen sighted man might have perceived that it was white, or had been. The Admiral's attention was drawn to it, and, shading his eyes with his hand, he looked in its direction for a long time, and said to the officer standing by him: "I sm told I am getting old. I must be, as I can see no white flag." The result of the dimness of sight, was that the insurgents were, as is well known, completely routed. ### A SYNDICATE AFTER THE C. & O. CANAL

New York Capital May Secure the Waterway.

Move Said to Be in the Interest of the Baltimore and Ohio.

Radical Improvements Contemplated by the Combination-Electricity

Within the past week Georgetown canal shippers have been watching closely for a change in the management of the Chesa peake and Ohio waterway. Until recently the rumors which originated early las winter to the effect that the canal was to pass from the control of the present man agement had been at rest, and many wer of the opinion that the old waterway was to be left in undisturbed possession of the corporation which now operates it. From recent devolopments, however, it now seems that efforts are being made by a party of outside capitalists to secure controlling interest in the canal stock.

A number of Georgetown business men who are interested in the canal traffic have received assurances that a syndicate of New York capitalists was organized a few weeks ago for the purpose of buying up a sufficient amount of the stock to give them a controlling interest. It is said that the syndicate is backed by millions of capital, and is working in the interests of the Baltimore and Ohio Rallroad Company. Last winter it was thought that, in the event winter it was thought that, in the event of the canal property passing into the hands of the railroad company, its use as a waterway would be abandoned and a railroad built along the tow path.

When seen by a Times reporter this morning, a well-known business man of the West End stated that this plan seemed to have been abandoned, and that the present scheme of the company embraces the project of continuing the canal as a waterway. It is said that, should the new syndicate gain control, the canal will be improved in every way. Where repairs are needed by the waterway proper, changes proved in every way. Where repairs are needed by the waterway proper, changes will be made. A part of the outlined plan of the new corporation includes the re-equipment of the carrying stock now in use on the waterway. Many of the old-fashioned barges will, if the plan of the syndicate is carried out, be replaced by new ones so constructed as to carry larger cargoes, and at the same time be less unwieldly. It is proposed to increase the number of boats in anticipation of the greatly augumented traffic which would greatly augumented traffic which would result from the improvements to the waterway. waterway.

For several years the installation of electricity on the canal for propelling the boats has been considered. Probably one of the greatest changes contemplated by the new syndicate is the equipment of the canal from Georgetown to Cumberland with an electric trolley system. By means of this system, beats could be propelled from points along the canal to either ter-minus in a much shorter space of time and at considerably less cost. It has been and at considerably less cost. It has been estimated that, with the increase of transportation facilities, the traffic of the canal would be more than doubled within a year or two after the inauguration of new methods. The cost of transportation by water is much less, even with the present equipment of the canal, than would be by a railroad over the present route of the waterway. The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad omnany's officials seem to have Railroad ompany's officials seem to have recognized this fact and are acting ac-cordingly. The proposed changes, when carried out, will no doubt be a boon to Georgetown and the business men who would be benefited directly or indirectly are watching for further developments.

The efforts now being made by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad to gain an entrance in Georgetown will, it is said, not be interfered with by the canal project. Its lines already extend through much of the country reached by the canal, but this fact will not prevent it from securing space in Georgetown for its Washington freight yards. It is understood that ne-gotiations for land between the canal and Rock Creek for trackage use have been begun, but great secrecy is maintained by the interested parties, so that it is difficult to secure detailed information.
